The Company

englisch dekor textilverlag – Europe’s Specialist for Flame Retardant Textiles

Founded in 1866 by Eduard August Englisch in Vienna, the continuously expanding company is managed in the fourth generation by the Fleischmann family. englisch dekor’s strength lies in its service – being able to offer its customers the widest selection possible and delivering promptly, at low cost and in all quantities all over Europe. The commitment and powers of innovation of the employees are the reason for the successful internationalization of this venerable brand.

englisch dekor’s reference list reads like a “who is who” including renowned names like Hotel Sacher Vienna or Hilton Zürich as well as the Helsinki Airport, the Vienna State Opera and the Life-Ball 2009. The textiles provide the greatest selection of fabrics in all variations, particularly in the important “flame retardant” certification category. englisch dekor has spared no cost or effort with respect to innovation and development to remain as up to date in this very crucial area as possible, thereby securing its leadership position.

In the field of architecture, Englisch has set itself a new goal – not least because of its own affinity (the company premises were designed by the architects Hermann & Valentiny) – namely, supporting interior designers and architects with its expertise. Providing expert advice and creating showrooms can be considered a matter of course. Because Erich and Heinz Fleischmann know from their own experience how difficult it is for designers to find the right textiles with the all-important, mandatory certificates and norms.

Preventing and hindering fires in buildings are therefore not empty words to englisch dekor. This “Mission Statement,” fast delivery, sophisticated and perfectly functioning logistics and over 4,000 designs stocked on the company premises are already appreciated by a wide range of clients and is now appealing to architects, too. > 02
